

Do you want to become a Peer Educator and campaign to end violence against African girls and women within your community?

Young People Speak Out

FORWARD is seeking young Africans, both male and female, between the ages of 16 –25, for our Young People Speak Out Project, to campaign against violence against girls and women particularly Female Genital Mutilation and Child and Forced Marriage.

The Foundation for Women's Health, Research and Development (FORWARD) is an international non-governmental organisation that works to advance the sexual and reproductive health and human rights of African girls and women.

It will be an opportunity for you to:

- Meet other likeminded young people campaigning for change within their community
- Train to become a campaigner and a Peer Educator for FORWARD
- Gain skills which will enable you to campaign against violence against African girls and women within your community and around the UK

*The training is free, travel expenses and food will be covered
We are looking in particular to recruit young men and women from FGM practising communities*
